

Petition for

An Appropriate Kwanzaa Exhibit

Inclusion in

National Museum of African American History and Culture

For more than fifty years, Kwanzaa has increasingly become an important part of African American culture and history. Its reach and that of the Nguzo Saba, the principles upon which Kwanzaa is built, has permeated the lives of millions of African Americans, including African peoples on the continent and throughout the African diaspora. This history should be honored with an appropriate exhibit in the National Museum of African American History and Culture, yet surprisingly, it is not.

“Kwanzaa came into being and assumed an international reach and relevance without petition for permission or recognition from the larger society. It was conceived, created and came into its own as an act of self-determination. It was and remains a way to speak our own special cultural truth, to celebrate ourselves and our awesome march thru human history and to raise up and recommit ourselves to principles and practices that represent and bring forth from us the best of what it means to be African and human in the world.”

We must organize to establish an appropriate Kwanzaa exhibit for the following reasons:

1. Kwanzaa is a Pan-African cultural holiday created in 1966 by an African American, Dr. Maulana Karenga, and first practiced within his organization Us.
2. Kwanzaa has grown from a single organization’s practice to an international holiday celebrated by millions of African descendants around the world.
3. Kwanzaa is officially recognized by the federal government, e.g. postage stamps and annual White House proclamations.
4. Kwanzaa is annually recognized by numerous state and municipal proclamations.
5. Kwanzaa’s fundamental purpose and practice should be honored and presented as a significant part of, and contribution, to African American history and culture in the museum, i.e. “Kwanzaa’s essential activities are about that which stresses, strengthens and celebrates family, community and culture.” This is done in five basic ways: “INGATHERING (unity) of the People; REVERENCE for the Creator and creation; COMMEMORATION of the Past; RECOMMITMENT to our highest ideals; and CELEBRATION of the good.”
6. Kwanzaa’s is a positive cultural holiday all African descendants can practice, because it is not based on religious or hero worship.
7. A Kwanzaa exhibit would be consistent with the four pillars upon which the National Museum of African American History and Culture stands. (visit: <https://nmaahc.si.edu/about/museum>)

The Kwanzaa Now Campaign encourage Kwanzaa practitioners and supporters to join the fight for Kwanzaa. Help us organize and campaign for an appropriate Kwanzaa exhibit be included in the National Museum of African American History and Culture. You may demonstrate your support of this endeavor by directing your petitions, emails and calls to: Mr. Lonnie G. Bunch, Founding Director, NMAAHC, 1400 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC 20560. Visit Kwanzaanow.org for more information about the campaign and ways you can support.

“The future of Kwanzaa is in the hands, hearts and minds of African people. It is they who are responsible for its rapid growth and wide-reaching impact. And thus, I am confident that Africans will protect this miracle they’ve created, be rightfully attentive to its integrity, well-being and wholeness, and insist on respect for it in every venue it’s practiced and presented.” Quotes by Dr. Maulana Karenga, Kwanzaa Founder, and author of “Kwanzaa: A Celebration of Family, Community and Culture”

Petition for an Appropriate Kwanzaa Exhibit in the National Museum of African American History and Culture

Kwanzaa is a cultural holiday created by African Americans and practiced by millions of African descendants around the world. The holiday is recognized by the federal government, but is not properly honored in the NMAAHC.

We, the undersigned, are concerned Kwanzaa practitioners and supporters who urge our leaders and NMAAHC to act now to install an appropriate Kwanzaa Exhibit in our national federal museum.
